ANSON'S PATENT BALANCE PRESSURE VALVE HYDRAULIC RAM, for which a silver Medial was awarded by the American Institute Ortober, 18-55. The above Ram which is a recent invention of the patentee, is capable of forcing water to a greater elevation than any other ram, with the same lead surply of water, and warranted not to stop working at any time, if there is a sufficient supply of water, and no leak of air traps in the drive pips.

In the onlinery ram, the valve rests upon the specture it is designed to close, presenting a nuch larger upper surface for the pressure in the air chamber than the area on the lower sufface, on which the water acts in opening it come mently the pressure per square much required to lift the valve is as mark greater in proportion in the area of the upper surface is greater than the area of the aperture—hence the great loss of power.

The principal improvement in this over other water rams consists in the upper and lower surfaces of the valve opening—into the air chamber—being of the same area, the pressure per square inch required to open it is but slightly greater than that in the air chamber; consequently there is no loss of power in the other rams which, having valve ceats, are liable to catch and retain sand or gravel, and thereinly to leak and get out of order. Other important advantages will be apparent in viewing it while in operation.

The subscriber has been a practical planter in this city and clesswhere for the post twenty year, and truck, by strick attention to the business, in all its various branches, to merit full confidence.

This may certify that I have made a trial of "Bach's American Compound" in a case of severe Bronchia Affection, and a long standing irritation of the mature-cat of the Admentary duct. By the use of two bottles of the Admentary duct. By the use of two bottles of the above Compound, it is thought a permanent cure was effected. I have seen its wonderful effects in a decided case of Screfals Concumption, where the patient was thought to be beyond cure—after taking a few bottles of the American Compound is now thought to be out of danger, and nearly well. From what I have seen of the Compound, I should certainly recommend its use is such cases as above named.
